Relationship between emotional intelligence and leadership style in middle manager

Khorshidi A, Tarkhan F. and Naghsh Z.

ABSTRACT: This article investigates the relationship of emotional intelligence and leadership style in middle manager. It is concluded that emotional intelligence is positively related to transformational leadership style and negatively related to transactional leadership style. Transformational-oriented style is explained by empathy; and Pragmatic style is explained by self-awareness and empathy.

ABSTRACT: The highly changeable and inconstant condition of organizational environments, including public and private sectors, has increased the importance of policy making. This paper is an attempt to present a model of network policy making and its components. By conducting a comprehensive literature review, the model fundamental components were first extracted, and then, by applying the 4R’s approach, the procedure of model development was finally provided. The model components can be used in different situations and organizations by considering their specific environments. Also, the model components can be used as a guideline for the organizations to improve their policy making procedures. Finally, provided theoretical and applied suggestions in order to prepare organizations for progressing in this direction.
