ABSTRACT: Nowadays, not only in academic areas but also among the ordinary people and organizations, auditors' independency is highly considered. This independency is assessed by the nature of the auditor's opinion, the type of the auditor, and the size of the auditing institution. Studies have shown that the size and type of the auditor's opinion do not have a significant impact on the auditing institution's rotation. Therefore, it is crucial to consider these factors in the selection and retention of auditors to ensure the integrity of the auditing process.
