ABSTRACT: Transnational Organized crimes are being considered as one of the most important problems of the 21st century. These crimes have a global impact and a relatively new field of study. Therefore, the need for international cooperation and efforts to prevent them has been recognized in the various parts of the world. The United Nations has prepared policies in this field. In this study the measures taken by Iran to prevent Transnational Organized Crimes and its estimated position compared to the UN Criminal Policy are discussed. In other words, this study attempts to study the criminal policies of Iran in comparison with international policies, especially from the perspective of the Palermo convention in the fight against Transnational Organized Crimes. This research was carried out through a review of documents with the type of a qualitative research. The findings indicate that there has been no particular prevention done and no independent body of strategies has been designated. So, in order to exit from this situation, different prevention strategies such as pastoral and social preventions have been set each of which is explained in the second part of this study. In the third section, measures taken by the government of Iran against Transnational Organized Crimes and UN conventions (Palermo and Merida) are brought together and their position is compared. The fourth section presents the conclusions and recommendations of the study.
