Network Policy Making: A Necessity for Today’s Organizations

Kamel M. Alvani S.M. and Mohammadi Moghadam Y.

ABSTRACT: The highly changeable and inconstant condition of organizational environments, including public and private sectors, has been the main reason for the necessity of having a new approach in the forms of policy making. The present research seeks to explore the concept of a network structure, with an emphasis on the management of social capital, in order to make new policy making decisions. Firstly, the authors identified the characteristics of networks, and reviewed the literature on network policies. Then, they provided a step-by-step model of policy making in network structures. Finally, they provided theoretical and applied suggestions in order to prepare organizations for progressing in this direction.
